FIGHT FOR THE FAIR.

The Great Debate Finally Inaugurated in the Lower House.

CLAIMS OF THE FOUR CITIES

Ably Voiced by Their Respective Champions on the Floor.

HILL SIGNS THE NEW YORK MEASURE In Time to Create a Diversion in Paver of the East

The debate upon the World's Fair bill was commenced in Congress yesterday Representative Flower opened in behalf of New York, and was followed by the adberents of Chicago, St. Louis and Washington. A vote will probably not be reached before Monday. ISPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCE. WASHINGTON, February 20 .- The House has at last taken up the World's Fair question, and there is some probability that a decision will be reached upon it within a week. The whole of to-day's session was devoted to the hearing of arguments in favor of the different sites. The popular interest in the subject was well evidenced by the crowded galleries, every seat being occupied during the entire session. When the interest in the speeches being delivered on the floor flagged a little, visitors turned to watch the flying fingers of four New England ladies occupying the Speaker's reserved seat, who had brought their knitting with them, so as not to lose time. Consequently, there was always something going on to amuse, and one of the visitors declared that she had never attended so interesting a session of the House before. Of the speeches, some were good, some bad and many indifferent.

A VOTE ON MONDAY.

To-morrow, and probably Saturday, the debate will continue, and on Monday the vote will be taken. As the roll is called, each member will declare his preference by naming the city he desires to vote for. It may take only the one roll call to settle the matter, and then the House will vote on the question. Shall a World's Fair be held in 1892? Upon that point, it is likely that there will be some lively talking, and the issue is held to be in doubt.

To-day Mr. Mills. of Texas, demanded half of the time in behalf of the opponents of the bill. The Speaker said that in the absence of an arrangement the matter of recognitions was one for the presiding offi-cer. Mr. Mills said that the presiding officer should, in fairness, recognize the opponents of the bills during half of the time. The Speaker replied that no doubt the expectations of the gentleman would be realized—so far as they were in accordance with the views of the Chair.

The Chairman of the committee, Mr. Candler, took the floor and opened the debate. He said that the country could be proud of the rivalry between the four cities. They were working for local interests; but they were also animated by a spirit of patriotism. The fair itself would be an honor to the United States wherever held; each of the four cities would do its best. The committee had presented two bills—one adapted to New York, Chicago and St. Louis, and the other to Washington.

FIRST GUN FOR NEW YORK. Representative Flower opened in behalf of New York. He said: of New York. He said:

I am for New York because I believe such a selection means the greatest possible success in this undertaking and because of her great advantages, and its proposition set forth a well-digested plan for practical operation, which would not, as a visionary scheme sprang up in a night, fall to pieces upon the test of demonstration, for it was founded upon principles of business suggested by men of business. New York would assume the responsibility to make it a success. The site was ready cipies of business suggested by men of business. New York would assume the responsibility to make it a success. The site was ready for use new. It contains 350 acres, while the Paris Exposition contained only 250 acres. Had any other city met this question of site and solved it? No: others had only attempted the financial problem, and would ask for a large appropriation. In Chicago, St. Louis and Washington this problem of site was still in the clouds or the mud. New York was the half-way station between the greater part of this country and the world, and through it comes and goes nearly 70 per cent of our exports and imports. Her commercial position, therefore, would give the United States, through this fair, an impetus it would receive from no other city.

through this fair, an impetus it would receive from no other city.

The American manufacturer and agriculturist would have a greater incentive to exhibit his wares and products in New York City than he would in any other by reason of the fact that he will have a larger local assemblage to be instructed and benefited, and by reason of the further fact that his goods would be thrown into comparison with the wares and products in the great commercial exchange of the continent. As this was to be an international exhibition, largely dependent for its success upon the acceptance by foreign nations of the invitation to participate in it, it behooves us to use due care in affording foreign exhibitors such facilities as may bring within the reach of all the opportunity to take part in it without subjecting them to unnecessary expense, delay and in the opportunity to take part in it without subjecting them to unnecessary expense, delay and ecting them to unnecessary expense, delay and lability to damage to their exhibits

GOVERNOR HILL IN LINE. In conclusion he said: "We offer New York for just what it is. We do not wish to detract from Chicago or St. Louis, or any other western city, for we know that the growth and prosperity of any part north, south, east or west, of this great American Republic Just here," said Mr. Flower, holding up a telegram, "I am informed that Governor Hill has signed the Fair bill.
(Applause.) Mr. Flower was followed by Mr. Moore of New Hammshire and Moore Mr. Moore, of New Hampshire, and Messrs. Covert, Cummings, Tracy and Quinn, all of New York, in favor of the selection of New York as the site.

Mr. Hull, of Illinois, was the first speaker Mr. Hull, of Illinois, was the first speaker in behalf of Chicago. He said:
Chicago is the great interior city, the great center of the United States being a short distance southeast of the city. It surpassed any other place in facilities of travel and ability to care for the people. The hotels were on an enormous scale, and had never been overtaxed. One had been opened last fall that was monumental, and how many more would come depended only on the energy of Chicago. Her car lines and stemmers could handle thousands of people. The city was accessible to the mining regions of Pennsylvania and the great agricultural belts of the West. Commerce was there carried on in the grandest scale by land and water. Her townage was the second in size among American countries.

ONE OF THE POINTS. A foreigner would not stop at the gate of the Republic and turn back, as he would if the fair were to be held at New York. He would go and see the Mississippi Valley, and the grand opulence of the great interior. The site at Chicago was all ready; the lands level and no Chicago was all ready: the lands level and no preparation was required. It would leave a great empty space in the treasury after New York had blasted away rocks enough to afford a site. Placed in the interior the fair would be visited by many more people of Chicago were enthusiastic; they were not bickering among themselves; they stood united to make the fair a success. What proportion of the attendance at the fair would be composed of foreign visitors? Perhaps 150,000 at most. He expected 16,000,000 Americans to attend the fair. Would it be proper to require 7,000,000 people to travel to the extreme edge of the country as they would have to do if the fair were beid in New York?

Mr. Creary, of Kentucky, earnestly argued

Mr. Creary, of Kentucky, earnestly argued in favor of Chicago, saying the three great-est national celebrations ever held in this country had been held in the East, and it was now the turn of the West. He urged was now the turn of the West. He urged that the fair should not be held on the rim of the country, but in the interior.

Mr. Taylor, of Illinois, said there was a great country in the West of which the people knew little, and he desired a fair in the West to educate the people of New York. For years the West had been the cow from which New York had drawn milk; it may that a the chould receive the second area. milk; it was time that she should receive some benefits in return. He concluded by telling of the wealth of the country sur-rounding Chiengo and the patronage which could expected to be bestowed upon a fair

A HIT AT CHICAGO. Mr. Frank, of Missouri, opened the battle for St. Louis. The site for the fair, he said, for St. Louis. The site for the fair, he said, was to be chosen upon sound reasons. If missionary education was the object Chicago was the place. In a historical commemoration like this, he wanted no political manager to locate the site according to what he thought were proper considerations. Chicago vied with New York in political animus, supplemented by sordid mercenary

St. Louis offered the advantages of location and was accessible to the greatest num-ber of citizens of the United States and the Southern Republics. Foreign goods could be unloaded on the levees of New Orleans with less confusion than at New York. St. Louis, in a spirit of lofty ambition, asked Congress to award her the fair. Her hospitality was known the world over; her eli-mate was excellent; she would bid the world welcome to a nursery of virtue, not a morasa

Mr. Niedringhaus, of Missouri, extolled the talents of the business men of St. Louis.
He said that he had there been able to start and carry on a business that had not an equal in the world. Mr. Breckinridge, of Arkansas, followed in the same line, touching upon the transportation facilities afforded by the Mississippi river, with its tributaries, and the great railway systems.

THE CLAIMS OF WASHINGTON. Mr. McComas, of Maryland, was for an exposition wherever it was to be held. But it was historically fitting that the Exposi-tion should be held here in Washington, in the District bearing the name of the discov-erer of the continent. He invoked the members to seek some higher motive and broader ground than locality. He appealed to the friends of Chicago, New York and St. Louis to come together in peace here, on national Messrs. Lee, of Virginia; Coleman, of Louisiana; Compton and Stockbridge, of Maryland, also spoke in favor of Washing-ton, and then the House adjourned until to-morrow. The proposed night session was

A CONFUSED WITNESS. O'Donnell Becomes Very Much Mixed on

Cross-Examination. CHICAGO, February 20 .- In the Cronin jury bribing case this morning the Court injury to return a verdict of not structed the guilty as to Thomas Kavanaugh and he was discharged. This left Jeremiah O'Donnell the only defendant. He went on the stand and made explicit denial of offering a bribe or attempting in any way to get a corrupt juryman accepted in the case.

On cross-examination he became confused and could not remember that he had made certain damaging admissions to the State's Attorney when first arrested. On redirect examination it was brought out that O'Donnell had no sleep the night or day before the inquisition in Judge Longenecker's office and having also had nothing to eat for 12 hours, was sick and ex-

PLAGS FOR SCHOOL BUILDINGS. The Educational Conference Passes a Rese

lution Approving the Plan. NEW YORK, February 20 .- At the Educational Conference here to-day a resolution was introduced by ex-President William F. Sheldon declaring that the association regarded the public school system as the chief source of civilization and the bulwark of civil and religious liberty. That they approved of placing the American flag over schoolhouses and recommended the study of the Declaration of Independence and other historical American papers. That they could meet hostile criticism and make the public schools the allies of home, and become sources of the highest moral instruc-tion without any sectarian bias. The members pledged themselves to do all in their power to establish the system in all sections of the Republic and make intelligence and lovalty a blessing. The resolution was passed unanimously.

COAL MEN IN CONPERENCE. The Advisability of Forming With Ore Dealers Discus

CHICAGO, February 20 .- A number of well known coal men met at the Grand Pacific to-day to confer concerning Lake Superior transportation sales. A. G. Gates, of Rochester, N. Y., presided. They discussed the advisability of forming some sort of an agreement with the Iron and copper ore dealers so that boats might come from Lake Superior to Chicago laden with ore and return with coal.

Most of the coal dealers were of the opinion that money could be saved by unloading in Chicago and shipping on the lake to all Lake Superior points. A proposition will undoubtedly be made to the ore men.

On Her Way to the Lepera.
